

Look Behind You

since I looked into you and you looked back at me I've tried to just go on and pretend you're just a song. you helped to write

since the dream I once knew was cast aside and torn in two every day fades to night every word hides in the shadows where once was light

but every once in awhile
I think of you and I smile
every once in awhile

you're in the corner of my mind but, in the corner of my eye you're not there to find and all the while you're away getting on with every day too caught up to hear me say
look behind you
and you'll find me standing there since I've turned your last page and moved on with the days and the nights every right is somehow wrong every note is just a song

you helped to write

but every once in awhile
I think of you and I smile
every once in awhile

you're in the corner of my mind
but, in the corner of my eye
you're not there to find
and all the while you're away
getting on with every day
too caught up to hear me say
look behind you and you'll find me
look behind you and you'll find me
look behind you and you'll find me standing there